The Psychology of Black Women, Section One of Division 35, began as a committee on Black women's concerns. With vision and perseverance, the committee gained a more prominent voice within the Division and Section One, The Psychology of Black Women, was established in 1984. As a section, The Psychology of Black Women has its own bylaws and governance structure and has scheduled time for invited presentations at the American Psychological Association’s annual convention.

Who we are:

The Psychology of Black Women, Section One of Division 35, began as a committee on Black women’s concerns. With vision and perseverance, the committee gained a more prominent voice within the Division and Section One, The Psychology of Black Women, was established in 1984. As a section, The Psychology of Black Women has its own bylaws and governance structure and has scheduled time for invited presentations at the American Psychological Association’s annual convention.

Our Vision:

- To create a forum where Black women can network and get mentoring and support from each other
- To provide outreach, guidance and mentoring to Black female students in Psychology
- To promote the development of methods of research and models of treatment and intervention that are ethnically, culturally, and gender appropriate for Black women
- To increase scientific understanding of those aspects of ethnicity, culture, and class among Black women which pertain to the psychology of women
- To maintain and increase the overall status of Black women in the profession of Psychology
- To increase the quality of education and training opportunities for Black women in Psychology
- To encourage the evolution and development of the specialty of the Psychology of Black Women as a science
- To advocate on behalf of Black women psychologists with respect to the formation of policies of Division 35
- To promote the general objectives of APA and Division 35
