4:00pm	15 min	Welcome, Approval of Minutes from 2021 EC Meeting, and Recognitions	Mary Gauvain, President
See here for 2021 minutes from the EC meeting Robert Golinkoff motioned to accept the minutes, Mark Cummings seconded, the motion passed. The recent award winners and new officers were announced and past officers were thanked for their service. (These individuals are listed below.) The leadership and activities of Division 7 are carried out by volunteers. The Executive Committee greatly appreciates the time and hard work of our members who serve in these various roles and are essential to the vitality of the Division. Before the announcements, a question was raised about the listserves of the Division. Adam Winsler, Listserv Administrator, described our three different listserves: Division 7 Executive Committee Listserve, Division 7 Members Listserve (for members only), General Announcements Listserve (anyone can join). Winners of the 2023 Division 7 awards: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Distinguished Contribution to Developmental Psychology: Laurence Steinberg • Urie Bronfenbrenner Award for Lifetime Contribution to Developmental Psychology in the Service of Science and Society: Richard Fabes • Mary Ainsworth Award for Excellence in Developmental Science: Glenn Roisman • Mavis Hetherington Award for Excellence in Applied Developmental Science: Sandra Simpkins • Eleanor Maccoby Book Award: Jean E. 4:15pm	15 mins	Program Report and Highlights	Elyse Dykhuis, Program Chair
A full report of the 2022 Division Program is at end of agenda: Program Report Elyse Dykhuis reported on this year’s Division 7 Convention Program. Thirty in-person and 30 virtual Division presentations are on the program. There is a good representation of developmental topics and areas of research. All Division 7 sessions are cross listed with other divisions and appear on the APA Convention app. It is useful to co-list our sessions with other Divisions because it increases attention to and attendance at our sessions and it does not affect our allotted program hours. Dr. Dykhuis shared what she learned about arranging our Convention program this year. For the past two years during the pandemic, the APA Convention was held virtually. Division 7 did not offer any programmed sessions. This year, our Division program departs from that of prior years, which largely included talks by our awardees. Although these talks were excellent, they were not well attended. Because of uncertainties related to the pandemic, we opted not to have awardee talks this year. This situation provided an opportunity to explore what may be the best approach for Division 7’s Convention programming going forward. Many ideas were suggested by Executive Committee members, including new and potentially more engaging formats such as debates, panels, and flash talks. The idea of having a special or focused topic or theme for the Division 7 Convention program was also raised, which could increase attendance especially if it is advertised well in advance. There was also discussion about the content of Division presentations and the importance of offering talks that both represent the scope of interests among Division members and are broad enough to appeal to attendees outside the Division. It is also felt that Division 7 members could benefit from science presentations that are clustered more closely together so that shorter, one- or two-day, conference attendance would be worthwhile and more cost efficient. In the past, APA has had such programming (e.g., Science Weekend) and the Division will talk with the Science Directorate about the return of this practice. There was also discussion of the importance of formally recognizing our awardees if they do not give award talks at the Convention. A virtual awards ceremony at a time other than the Convention period, a practice that is used successfully by several Divisions and by APA at large, will be explored.

Time	Length	Topic	Speaker
The 2023 Convention will be held from August 3 – 6 in Washington DC. There was discussion of working closely with developmental scientists in this region in developing the program, which may be a way of recognizing and supporting our members in the area as well as increasing Division 7 attendance from neighboring regions.

and 2021 (by about $700). Division expenses significantly decreased as well in 2020 and 2021 primarily because of no (or little) money spent for travel and convention. The majority of division expenses in 2021 were awards, grants, and division membership service fees. Division Membership service fees ($1,625) remained stable. Mid-Year 2022 Our 2022 income as of 7/25/22 exceeds expenses approximately by $8,000. Dues income has decreased in 2022 as well. Division expenses has significantly increased primarily due to the in-person conference in 2022 (e.g., joint CYF social hour, division social hour). Of note, we have more expenses that are not reflected in current financial reports (e.g., division membership service fee, memory books, gifts) and the cost for division social hour is based on the estimate from hotel, so the figures stated in the attached may change.

5:10 pm	35 mins	Science Directorate
A scheduled presentation by Mitch Prinstein, APA Chief Science Officer, and Derek Snyder, Senior Director for Science Outreach and Partnerships, about the APA Science Directorate occurred. The Science Directorate has new leadership with increased emphasis on science at APA. https://www.apa.org/science APA has 133,000 members, including a large number of students (about 40,000). The Science directorate has several initiatives to appeal to members in the science divisions and to students in particular, including a Science Student Council within the Science Directorate. Also, student members can attend the APA Convention for free.

Priorities and goals of the Science Directorate as well as recent initiatives from the Office were discussed, including: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Science spotlight https://www.apa.org/news/science-spotlight • Science training sessions (free) • Science summits • Editor’s choice newsletter • DEI – Science Directorate coordinates with the DEI Task Force Mary Gauvain volunteered to represent Division 7 as the science partner in the Science Directorate.
5:45 pm	15 mins	Update from Division 7 Representatives to APA Council	Michael Lamb and Sandra Graham
The full report is at the end of agenda: Council Representative Report The two Division Council Representatives, Michael Lamb and Sandra Graham, joined the Executive Committee meeting at the conclusion of the day-long APA Council Meeting. They reported on the meeting, focusing on major issues of relevance to Division 7 including new and continuing task forces. They discussed how to get Division members more involved with children’s initiatives and efforts at APA. They reported that the Council’s discussion of a graduate student training document was tabled. This document will be discussed at the next Council meeting, and it may have implications for developmental students and developmental training programs. Michael Lamb discussed the possibility of Division 7 having its own journal. The main reasons are to bring greater visibility to the Division and to provide income for the Division that could be used to support grants and participation in APA activities, especially for student and early career members. Although the journal Developmental Psychology is an APA journal, it is not associated with Division 7 because it was one of the original (core) journals of APA and all core journals are overseen by the organization at large, not by Divisions. The Executive Committee discussed the idea of aligning a possible Division journal with APA’s mission in the areas of policy, advocacy, and supporting research. The Executive Committee will explore this idea further in the coming year.
The meeting was adjourned at 6:00 pm.

Program Report

This year's Division 7 programming came together well and we were as accommodating as we could be to our contributors and their desire for in-person, hybrid, and virtual options. As you might have seen in the Division 7 Newsletter and the Convention Flyer from the Division, our program includes six symposium sessions (four of which are Critical Conversations), one skill-building session (also being offered for CE credits), three invited addresses, including a symposium with the three Division Presidents (past, current, and elected), along with about 30 in-person posters and 30 virtual posters. We are incredibly excited about our Division's offerings this year as they speak to enduring questions in developmental science as well as current events that have shifted how we understand the importance of developmental science in public discourse.

With cross-listings from other divisions, (on the Convention APP, you can navigate to Sessions => Browse by Division => Division 7), the various sessions included under our Division are listed and the diverse range of topics included can be seen.

We requested an update regarding the number of participants registered and we are awaiting response.

It has been a pleasure serving as the program chair this year and I look forward to Dr. Andres Bustamante taking over as program chair next year.

Report to Division 7

February 2022 Meeting of APA Council

The meeting which took place from 24 to 26 February (with Caucuses meeting all day on 20 February) was supposed to have been ‘in person’ but was entirely virtual following high levels of infection in the DC area during January. Fortunately, those rates have since declined but APA decided it was better for participants to avoid unnecessary travel. In the end, the meeting was perhaps the most successful virtual meeting I’ve experienced since the start of the pandemic. It was the first to be chaired by President Frank Worrell (Ed Psych at Berkeley).

Please note that copies of all the Resolutions, Statements, and Guidelines mentioned below should be available soon (if not already) on the APA website.

Perhaps of greatest relevance to developmental scientists was approval of new Guidelines for child custody evaluations. These attracted some hostility in the initial caucuses so I worked behind the scenes during the week to ensure that the robust and thoughtful evidence-based guidance would be approved, as they were by a large margin on Saturday.

Youth were also of concern in the Resolution on the Interrogation of Criminal Suspects; research tells us that young suspects are especially vulnerable in such contexts and the new Resolution provided an updated summary of the research on this topic.

Council approved a Policy Statement on psychology’s role in advancing population health. Many of the issues discussed in the statement are centrally relevant to developmental science and thus to many of the Division’s members.

New Guidelines were also approved in relation to the ethical conduct of research by high school students as were National Standards for High School psychology courses.

Two other important topics were less directly related to the Division’s focus. One was a very detailed report from APA’s Task Force on climate change. The report focuses on the role that psychology is playing in shaping effective responses as well as in addressing some of the distress experienced by individuals. It also elicited some discussion of the need for the Association, as well as each of us, to alter our own behavior. In fact, APA has already reduced the number of in-person meetings it hosts and plans to continue conducting more business virtually after the pandemic recedes. An interesting factoid: APA is in better shape financially now than it was before the pandemic because its expenses have gone down!

Council also approved new Guidelines for assessment and intervention with persons with disabilities and passed a Resolution affirming and building on APA’s history of support for reproductive rights.

Most contentious of all was a proposal to allow Associate Members of the Association to vote after being in role for only 1 year; current rules require that they be associate members for 5 years before being enfranchised. This proposal will now go to the membership for a vote because it requires a By-laws change.

Membership Report

Membership Report for Division 7, 8 Jul 22

Our total membership as of July 8, 2022 is 1113 members, with 340 new members since 1/2021. To date, we have collected $11,160 in membership dues from Student Members ($6), First year members ($12), and renewing members ($24). We have 354 dues exempt members on our roster as well. Our total number of members is a slight decrease from 2021, when we had a total of 1141 members. Year to date, we have added 340 new members from 2020, with the largest group of new members being student members.

RE: 2022 Division 7 Financial Report
DATE: July 25, 2022

The attached spreadsheet summarizes the assets, liabilities, income, and expenses for year-end 2021 and mid-year 2022 as of 7/25/22. The attached budget also includes the past 5 years' budgets to track changes and estimate expected costs and revenues over time. The Young Scholars' Fund is being transitioned from a separate account to an attribute code for tracking purposes, so it is included as a line item under "Assets" beginning in 2017.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Year-End 2021

Our 2021 income exceeded expenses by over $6,000. The majority of division income comes from membership dues. Income decreased in 2021, primarily because of decreased dues income and investment income. Dues income had increased until 2019, but has decreased in 2020 (by about $900) and 2021 (by about $700). Division expenses significantly decreased as well in 2020 and 2021 primarily because of no (or little) money spent for travel and convention. The majority of division expenses in 2021 were awards, grants, and division membership service fees. Division Membership service fees ($1,625) remained stable.

Mid-Year 2022

Our 2022 income as of 7/25/22 exceeds expenses approximately by $8,000. Dues income has decreased in 2022 as well. Division expenses has significantly increased primarily due to the in-person conference in 2022 (e.g., joint CYF social hour, division social hour). Of note, we have more expenses that are not reflected in current financial reports (e.g., division membership service fee, memory books, gifts) and the cost for division social hour is based on the estimate from hotel, so the figures stated in the attached may change.
